McGregor Museum, Kimberley
18:00 on 16 May 2014

also marking
International Museums Day

This book is about the 'doing' of heritage, its focus, crucially, on the process as much as the product. Its authors are indigenous and academic, of community, museum and university background.

Texts are contributed by Mary Lange, Liana Müller Jansen, Roger Fisher, Keyan Tomaselli, David Morris, Euodia Badenhorst, Izak Kruiper, Jan Oeliset Org, Lydia Kruiper, Lizet Verwoerd, Koot Msawula, //ankie Klein Dawid Kruiper, Belinda Org (Kruiper), Carine Müller, Miliswa Magongo, Shanade Barnabas, Lauren Dyll-Myklebust, Tessa Toerien, Petrus Jansen and Pedro Dausab. Chapters and primary materials are in English, Afrikaans and Nama (with translations). Illustrated with photographs, graphics, sketches.

≠Khomani San community members and researchers from the University of KwaZulu-Natal, the Centre for Communication Media and Society, Pretoria University, the University of Cape Town, the McGregor Museum Kimberley, and ArrowSA have joined in a project to engage with one another and with rock engravings near Kakamas in the Northern Cape. The project, with this book as one of its outcomes, is funded by the National Heritage Council.
